University of Massachusetts Boston

ScholarWorks at UMass Boston

1-1-2014

Do The Write Thing Essay, 2014

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.umb.edu/dtwt

Part of the Civic and Community Engagement Commons, Domestic and Intimate Partner Violence Commons, and the Educational Sociology Commons

Violence

    Violence is one of the things that has changed society a lot. Violence is an aggressive behavior. There is a lot or various of reasons that causes this kind of behavior. Many people are violent to express their anger towards someone or something. They think that by being violent it can solve the situation that they are in. They are wrong. Violence doesn't solve anything. It just harms people and makes the situation worse. Violence has affected my life in many ways. I remember when I was in Elementary school, I was only in the fifth grade. I experienced the worst time of my life. This horrible experience occured in school. There were so many students that were very violent. All the students would fight by punching and kicking each other. They would fight every where they went, during school. They would never stop fighting even though other students would tell them to stop. It eventually got much worser. Why? Because even the teachers were violent too. They would hit everyone in class, including me of course. It was really terrifying for me and my classmates. If you didn't do your homework they would punch you and yell at you. They would even make you bleed sometimes! They would even hurt your feelings and make you feel so bad. All the students were violent because they would learn it from the teachers. They thought that because the teachers did it, it was cool for them to do it ass well. Some students did it only to act up and try to look cool. Being violent doesn't make you look cool, at all. Others did it to try and get attention. They probably felt left out so they started to follow what are teachers did. Some students were afraid to go to my school. It was a terrible experience for me. Noone got along, they would swear at each other. But then i decided to make a stand! I was tired that everyone was violent, even the teachers. All you could see are bruises on my classmates face and body. I decided to bring in a group from another school so that they can help us out. They taught us everything about violence. They showed us a couple of videos of violence and they were scared. They didn't realize how horrible they would act. They told as many things to them untill they realized that what they were doing was wrong. At the end everyone became friends. Everyone stopped being so violent. We were all friendly, and proud of each other for making a huge change. You see, children aren't born violent. Children learn what they live. If home is a frightening, violent, abusive place, that's what the child learns to expect. That's why it's important for parents to not act violent because their child will learn that and start doing the same, because they think it's right. The easy availability to weapons of all kinds makes it easier for children to get their hands on them. Children can also learn violence through movies, television, video games, or even through the internet. Children can also be influenced by those around them, not just at home but in school, and in the community too. They can learn and accept violent behavior by just being around people that act violent. Children can also learn to be violent by the lack of guidance. Without an adult being there to supervise, children don't learn to distinguish right from wrong. Other children start to be violent just to seek attention. But either way children still become violent and harmful towards others. They just don't only hurt them by punching them but they also hurt their feelings, and to them it really affects them. That's why it's important to prevent children to become violent. Something I can do about youth violence is to prevent children from playing video games that can be very violent with strong course language and things that are bad influence to them. Another way is to prevent them from hitting other children. Or as it is well known as bullying. I can stop them from hurting others feelings. I can do many things to prevent youth violence. Violence is an extreme form of aggression, such as assault, rape or murder. Violence has many causes, including fustration, violent media, violence at home or at school, or to seek attention. Certain situations also increase the risk of aggression, such as drinking, insult and other provocations.

1

2