

University of Massachusetts Boston

ScholarWorks at UMass Boston

---

Do the Write Thing, Boston

Breaking the Cycle of Violence

---

1-1-2014

Do The Write Thing Essay, 2014

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.umb.edu/dtw>

Part of the Civic and Community Engagement Commons, Domestic and Intimate Partner Violence Commons, and the Educational Sociology Commons

---

Recommended Citation

"Do The Write Thing Essay, 2014" (2014). Do the Write Thing, Boston. 169.
<https://scholarworks.umb.edu/dtw/169>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Breaking the Cycle of Violence at ScholarWorks at UMass Boston. It has been accepted for inclusion in Do the Write Thing, Boston by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at UMass Boston. For more information, please contact scholarworks@umb.edu.

Why do we use violence to solve our problems or to prove a point? If you ask me I know that the only point you are proving is that violence is not the answer to the problem and you are just making the problem worse by using violence. I think that there is no point in using violence in the first place. Maybe you were fighting about which baseball team is better. Instead of violence you can see when they play one another which team is better.

There are other ways to settle who has the last cookie or who has a better shirt. Maybe you can have a match on a video game or a board game. Not only do you settle the argument and not use violence but you can have fun and maybe make some new friends. But if you are fighting over something that has to be right then, then you can arm wrestle or tick tack toe. You can even make up your own game. You should never use violence to solve problems just for the last cookie or a baseball team. Violence is not the answer!

Believe

████████████████████

Why do we use violence to solve our problems or to prove a point? I know that the only point for the proof is that violence is not the answer to the problem and you are just making the problem worse by using violence. I think that there is no point in using violence in the first place. Maybe you were talking about which baseball team is better. Instead of violence you can see when they play one another which team is better. There are other ways to settle who has the best cookie or who has a better shirt. Maybe you can have a match on a video game or a board game. Not only do you settle the argument and not use violence but you can have fun and maybe make some new friends. But you are fighting over something that has to be right there from you can wrestle or tick each other. You can even make up your own game. You should never use violence to solve a problem just for the last cookie or a baseball team. Violence is not the answer.