Violence

Violence is every where, even where you least expect it. It can happen so fast you would not know what to do or where to run. It's a life or death matter, take it serious because something may happen. Something can go so good then go so bad. Well that's like my brother. he was doing good in school and getting good grades. He was not bad. Then around the age of 14 years old things started to change with him. Grades started to go down, he started to hang out with these unknown boys that were in gangs. He would come home late, sometime we would not know where he would be. My mom would try keeping him in and making him stay after school. But that wasn't working. It started to get worse as soon as he would get older. Later that night my mom had got a call, it was my brother saying he was in jail. My mom didn't know what to say. She was scared but knew he had done something wrong. My mom wanted to keep him in jail over night because she wanted him to think about what he had did. Turns out it didn't work. About

A month or 2 later, he went back to jail and all the police saw was another black boy with a gun and drugs. He end up getting sent to jail for about a year and a half. Now He wishes he would of listened to my mom when he was younger. Now he's sitting in jail wishing he was out and working like his other brother.

A month or so later the next week to jail and all the police saw was another piece of paper with a pen and darker the end up getting sent to jail for about a year and a half. Now he carries the record of his record to my mom when he was younger. Now was sitting in jail waiting he was out and working like his other brother.
