Think Tanks meet five times a year for intense discussion around the most pressing issues facing higher education. Each of the six NERCHE Think Tanks is currently accepting nominations for membership for the 2007-2008 academic year. Professionals Can Find Their Leadership Voice (Jossey-Bass, April 2007), at the Hoagland-Pincus Conference Center in Shrewsbury, MA. The Colloquium offered an important opportunity for participants to think and talk together about how faculty and other academic professionals can have a greater impact on their own institutions. Thirty-five participants were in attendance; the audience comprised current and past Think Tank members, administrators, faculty, practitioners, scholars, policymakers and graduate students in higher education from across New England.

NERCHE convenes Senior Associates/Advisory Board meeting

On May 21, 2007, NERCHE convened a meeting of its Senior Associates, regional and national leaders in higher education, to help reflect on NERCHE's current practice, develop strategies for change, and lay out future areas of focus. Senior Associates function as an ad hoc advisory board to the Center, offering an array of expertise, experience, and interests that can be employed to help NERCHE assess current directions and set future ones.

NERCHE holds Meta-Think Tank Meeting

On May 7, 2007, NERCHE brought together a group of longstanding Think Tank participants for a "Meta-Think Tank" meeting at the UMass Collaborative Services Center in Shrewsbury, MA. Grounded in a review of the original intent of NERCHE's Think Tanks and a summary of their current status, the goals of the Meta-Think Tank were to: (1) discuss what is working well with the Think Tanks as well as potential modifications to existing practice; and (2) consider alternative and/or complementary models for change. The meeting was facilitated by Glenn Gabbard, NERCHE's Associate Director.
