Violence has affected my life because I've had relatives that had died because of the violence that has occurred by the youth because they had been pressured into the killings. Also, my mother would not allow me to go to a local park because that ~~is~~ is a place where there are many drive by's and shootings over a loss on a basketball game. Which shows that shootings can affect your personal and social lives. Secondly, there are many causes of youth violence such as peer pressure, it's when a friend or relative draws you in or strongly persuades you to do a negative action which can potentially get you into trouble. Next, living in a dangerous environment or house hold can cause you to physically or mentally hurt people, when I mean physically to me it means to abuse somebody with your fist. Also, when you mentally hurt people is by bullying and hurting somebody's feelings by talking about their personal life or the way they look and even how they dress. In conclusion, When skys are blue some people change, however when it is dark outside people follow. Which shows that violence is hated nobody cares for it which is why it is not appreciated.
