The Mauricio Gastón Institute

Latinos in Hartford | Connecticut

by Daniel W. Vasquez, Research Associate

The Mauricio Gastón Institute of the University of Massachusetts Boston conducts research on and for the Latino population. A goal is to generate the kind of information and analysis necessary to develop sound public policy, and to improve Latino participation in the policy making process. In an effort to present vital information about Latinos to diverse audiences, the Gastón Institute has produced a series of basic demographic profiles for the states and selected cities of New England, based on the United States Census 2000.

Census 2000 data include changes in the way people were counted. The most significant change is to allow persons to select more than one race, creating a new multiracial category of “two or more races”, but meaning people may not be included in the race with which they most identify. There was, however, no way to choose more than one ethnicity; one must choose either Latino or not. Throughout this profile, numbers reflect Latinos of all races, or non-Latinos by race, with persons of two or more races counted separately. All categorizations are based solely on self-identification. All of this complicates comparisons between 1990 and 2000 data. However, the concepts are similar enough to make trends and patterns clear.

In Hartford, the general population changes from 1990 to 2000 were not similar to national and state trends. The population of people of color — African Americans, Asians, Latinos, Native Americans, and Pacific Islanders — grew at a higher rate than did the population of non-Hispanic Whites, which actually shrank (see table 1). The total population of Hartford decreased by 13.1%, but its composition changed substantially. Latinos had a larger numerical growth than any other group, increasing by 5,123 or 11.6%, although “some other race” had a higher percent increase. Latinos now represent 40.5% of the population, an increase of 8.9 percentage points and the largest gain of any group. Hartford has the largest population of Latinos in Connecticut and the third largest in the New England states. As a percentage of the total population, the Latino population in Hartford ranks first in the state.

Note: Growth figures will not balance due to the new multiracial category.

^a 'Asian and Pacific Islander' was split for the 2000 census. Growth and changes reflect combined total.

^b There was no equivalent category in the 1990 census.

All Latino national-origin groups grew significantly between 1990¹ and 2000. The largest group in Hartford is Puerto Rican, at 80.4%, followed by “Other” Latinos and “Other” South American. “Other” Latinos were the fastest-growing population, growing by 122.2%, a trend seen across the U.S. (see table 2 and figure 1). A person is counted as “Other” if they write in “Spanish” or give an answer that can’t be assigned to a particular nationality (such as “Latino”), or if they identify more than one origin, or leave the answer blank. Future scholarly studies may better describe the composition of this category. The detailed breakdown of Central and South Americans is available at the Census Bureau’s American Fact Finder service, online at: factfinder.census.gov.

Latino-headed households are much more likely to rent than to own their home, 87.4% versus 12.6%, although there has been a 3.2% increase in home ownership since 1990 (see table 3). Still, this is much lower than the state average of 66.8%. Although there has been a small growth in the proportion of non-family households, it is still true that most Latinos, 74.2%, live in family households (see table 4). Married couples with children represent 18% of Latino-headed households, less than the Connecticut average of 24.5%. Families made up of a single female with children account for 33.2% of Latino households, which is greater than the state average of 7.9%, but less than it was in 1990.

The age composition of Latinos in Hartford has changed. There has been an increase among all age groups, but especially among those in the middle years. Even though there are many more children, the overall Latino population is maturing (see figures 2 and 3).

While the Latino population in Hartford and in the rest of the country remains relatively young, it is older than it was in 1990. In 2000, 42.2% of Latinos were younger than 20, just slightly fewer than the 44.8% in 1990 (see table 5). The Latino median age of 24.3 is much younger than the overall Connecticut median age of 37.4. Women still tend to be older than men, but the gap closed during the 1990s. In addition to becoming relatively older, both Latinos and Latinas became less concentrated in the 20-29 age group (see tables 6 and 7).
