Overview of Community-based Participatory Intervention Research (CBPR)

The Gastón Institute responds to requests from government and foundations for CBPR studies seeking to test theories and methods for addressing disparities in educational, health, and economic outcomes in U.S. Latino and Latin American communities.

Our future research in this area seeks to answer questions about the factors that contribute to the production of disparities in health, educational, and economic outcomes.

Our current CBPR projects seek to test the feasibility of a variety of intervention strategies.
