Latinos in Boston | Massachusetts

by Charles Jones, Research Associate

The Mauricio Gastón Institute of the University of Massachusetts Boston conducts research on and for the Latino population. A goal is to generate the kind of information and analysis necessary to develop sound public policy, and to improve Latino participation in the policy making process. In an effort to present vital information about Latinos to diverse audiences, the Gastón Institute has produced a series of basic demographic profiles for the states and selected cities of New England, based on the United States Census 2000.

Census 2000 data include changes in the way people were counted. The most significant change is to allow persons to select more than one race, creating a new multiracial category of “two or more races,” but meaning people may not be included in the race with which they most identify. There was, however, no way to choose more than one ethnicity; one must choose either Latino or not. Throughout this profile, numbers reflect Latinos of all races, or non-Latinos by race, with persons of two or more races counted separately. All categorizations are based solely on self-identification. All of this complicates comparisons between 1990 and 2000 data. However, the concepts are similar enough to make trends and patterns clear.

In Boston, the general population changes from 1990 to 2000 were similar to state and national trends. The population of most people of color — African Americans, Asians, Latinos, and Pacific Islanders — grew at a higher rate than did the population of non-Hispanic Whites, which actually shrank (see table 1). The total population of Boston increased by 2.6%, but its composition changed substantially. Latinos had a larger numerical growth than any other group, increasing by 23,134 or 37.3%, although both Asians and “some other race” had a higher percent increase. Latinos now represent 14.4% of the population, an increase of 3.7 percentage points and the largest gain of any group. Non-Hispanic Whites are no longer the majority of Bostonians. Boston has the largest population of Latinos in Massachusetts and in the New England states. As a percentage of the total population, the Latino population in Boston ranks 10th in the state.

Note: Growth figures will not balance due to the new multiracial category.

^a 'Asian and Pacific Islander' was split for the 2000 census. Growth and changes reflect combined total.

^b There was no equivalent category in the 1990 census.

Boston - Growth and Change of the Latino Population

All Latino national-origin groups grew between 1990¹ and 2000 except Cubans. The largest group in Boston is Puerto Rican, at 32.3%, followed by “Other” Latinos and Dominicans. “Other” Latinos were the fastest-growing population, growing by 152%, a trend seen across the U.S. (see table 2 and figure 1). A person is counted as “Other” if they write in “Spanish” or give an answer that can't be assigned to a particular nationality (such as “Latino”), or if they identify more than one origin, or leave the answer blank. Future scholarly studies may better describe the composition of this category. The detailed breakdown of Central and South Americans is available at the Census Bureau’s American Fact Finder service, online at: factfinder.census.gov.

Latino-headed households are much more likely to rent than to own their home, 15.8% versus 84.2%, although there has been a 2.8% increase in home ownership since 1990 (see table 3). Still, this is much lower than the state average of 61.7%. Although there has been a small growth in the proportion of non-family households, it is still true that most Latinos, 70%, live in family households (see table 4). Married couples with children represent 21.6% of Latino-headed households, slightly less than the Massachusetts average of 23.3%. Families made up of a single female with children account for 26.2% of Latino households, which is greater than the state average of 7.5%, and a 1% increase since 1990.

Notes:

¹ Sample data from 1990 is based on the “Long Form” files. About one person or household in six receives the Long Form Census. The estimates from there do not match the enumerations in the 100% or “Short Form” data. For example there is a 4.5% difference in the total number of Latinos in Massachusetts. There are sources of error in any census or survey, however the estimates here are accurate enough to note trends and patterns.

Figure 3
Boston - Age Profile 1990

The age composition of Latinos in Boston has changed. There has been an increase among all age groups, but especially among those in the middle years. Even though there are many more children, the overall Latino population is maturing (see figures 2 and 3).

The Latino population in Boston and in the rest of the country remains relatively young. In 2000, 36.9% of Latinos were younger than 20, just slightly more than the 36.5% in 1990 (see table 5). However, the Latino median age of 25.9 is higher than in 1990, though much younger than the overall Massachusetts median age of 36.5. Women still tend to be older than men, and the gap increased during the 1990s. In addition to becoming relatively older, both Latinos and Latinas became less concentrated in the 20-29 age group (see tables 6 and 7).
