Dr. Richard M. Freeland, 33, a distinguished historian and educational administrator, was named Dean of College IV, a College of Professional Studies at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

The announcement was made by Dr. Carlo L. Golino, Chancellor of UMass-Boston at the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the University. The Trustees confirmed the appointment of Dr. Freeland.

For the past year Dr. Freeland has been Assistant Chancellor of UMass-Boston as well as Director of Educational Planning.

The new Dean will supplement planning for the new college during the coming year. Students will be enrolled for September, 1975. Some 500 are expected to be in the first class.

The college calls for five broad areas of professional studies. They are:

- Urban Technology (including applied science and engineering in such urban problem areas as environmental control, transportation, housing);
- Business and Public Administration;
- Architecture and Urban Design (including urban and regional planning, architecture, environmental design);
- Mass Communications (including journalism, film, TV, radio, communications technology);
- Community Health (including nutrition, medical technology, environmental and occupational health).

The objectives of the college will be:

1. Provide career-related education in areas that are of interest to students and offer professional opportunities to them; specifically, planning should begin in the areas of Management Sciences, Planning and Design, Urban Technology, Mass Communications, and Community Health;
2. Diversify the offerings in UMass-Boston curriculum in a manner insuring that the first four colleges are capable of offering a broad range of liberal arts and career-related programs in the major areas of undergraduate student need;
3. Establish high quality programs that meet established standards and requirements for entrance into the professions with which the College is concerned;
4. Encourage maximum flexibility for students and faculty to develop programs that cut across traditional programmatic lines within and between career areas;

(Continued on page 2)
Dr. Richard M. Freeland named Dean of College IV (Continued)

5. Operate within the college system of UMass-Boston by developing as an essentially self-contained unit;
6. Integrate career-related education with work in the liberal arts;
7. Take full advantage of opportunities for inter-institutional cooperation;
8. Explore new ways of offering career-related education that take advantage of new educational ideas and meet needs not well provided for elsewhere.

Dr. Freeland is the author of "The Truman Doctrine and the Origins of McCarthyism," and has had a rich and varied teaching and educational research career over the past 10 years.

His teaching career has been, in addition to UMass-Boston, at Boston College, Northeastern University, the University of Pennsylvania and in the Philadelphia public schools.

Dr. Freeland has also been a program planner for the Model Cities Program in Trenton, N. J.

Collective Bargaining Conference

Rules and regulations governing conduct of collective bargaining between Massachusetts governmental units and public employees will be made public for the first time at a conference on Collective Bargaining for the Public Sector, Wednesday, June 19 at UMass-Boston, beginning at 10 A.M.

The rules and regulations, developed by the State Labor Relations Commission, will be discussed by Commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan. Macmillan will be opening speaker at the day-long conference.

The symposium is jointly sponsored by the Institute for Governmental Services and the Institute for Labor Affairs of the University of Massachusetts, supported by the federal Intergovernmental Personnel Act. Maurice A. Donahue is Director of the Institute for Governmental Services, and Joseph J. Cass directs the Institute for Labor Affairs.

Macmillan's opening remarks will be followed by a reaction panel of municipal, school, and labor experts.

In afternoon workshops, panelists will discuss "Who Do The Unions Represent?", "What Is Subject To Negotiation?", "Preparing for Negotiations," and "Impasse--What Then?".

Speakers will include:
Walter J. Kelliher, Mayor of Malden;
Mark Dalton, General Counsel, Mass. State Employees Association;
Marcia Greenbaum, Member, National Dispute Center, American Arbitration Association;
Charles W. Leftwich, Assoc. Superintendent, Boston Public Schools;
Dr. William H. Hebert, Executive Secretary-Treasurer Massachusetts Teachers Association;

(Continued on Page 3)
Collective Bargaining Conference Speakers (Continued)

John W. Church, Regional Director, American Arbitration Association;
Sanford Kowal, Kowal and Kowal;
Edward Powers, Director of Civil Service;
Alan Drachman, Holtz and Drachman;
Dr. John T. Conlon, University of Massachusetts, Associate Dean, School of Business Administration;
Francis Martin, Staff Representative, Mass. Foundations of Teachers AFL-CIO;
Paul Dorr, Labor Relations Consultant
Lawrence T. Holden, Jr., Chairman, Board of Conciliation and Arbitration;
Richard W. Coleman, Segal, Roitman and Coleman; and Joseph McParland, Collective Bargaining Agent, City of Quincy.

Check Deposit Service

Did you know that the University has an Automatic Check Deposit service? Any employee desiring to deposit their pay check weekly may do so by first opening a checking account at the State Street Bank & Trust Company and then filling out the necessary form that is available in the Personnel Office. Checks are then deposited in that account on each pay day, eliminating the nuisance of trips to the bank.

Antelo Lectures

Professor Antonio Antelo, of the Spanish Department, College I, was invited by the Spanish Club of Boston, on June 8, to a lecture-colloquium in the Pan American Society of New England. He spoke about "Tradition and art in Santiago de Compostelo". Professor Antelo will travel to Spain as coordinator of the U-Mass Summer Program in the University of Salamanca. He will also lecture on Spanish medieval subjects at various Spanish universities and colleges.

Bicentennial Planning

President Robert Wood has established a pan-university Bicentennial Committee for the University of Massachusetts. Chairman of the Committee is Franklin Patterson, Secretary of the University and Frank L. Boyden Professor.

The UMass-Boston committee consists of Professor Ernest Becker, Chemistry; Professor Badi Foster, College of Public and Community Service; Professor George Goodwin, Politics II; Professor Anny Newman, Russian II, and Professor Roger Frouty, History II.

The campus committee is searching for a campus inventory of capabilities for participation in Bicentennial programming. Guidelines for the University's participation suggest, at this time, that the first and foremost criteria should be the program's intellectual content, its potential for long-range impact, improvements and social change, and/or its creative and innovative aspects, rather than commemorative or retrospective features. Programs should be defined in relation to the nature of the American experience past, present, and future, or the American experience in the world setting.

What will be most appreciated are faculty and staff suggestions and your ideas on what the theme for this campus should be in our Bicentennial activities. (Continued to Page 4)
In addition to the theme, what are the inventories on this campus that can make an impact within the suggested guidelines?

Send your ideas to either Professor Roger Prouty, History I, or John Larner, Director, Public Relations, or to any member of the Committee named above.

All the statistics are not in yet, but approximately 1200 students are attending the first session of Summer School.

The Add-Drop deadline was last Thursday. The first session will continue through July 19. The second session will begin on July 22 and continue through August 30.

With the Fall semester beginning Tuesday, September 3, the campus is actually a 12-month operation. Remember, the Summer Sessions began four days after the Commencement exercises.