The John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs is named for the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives from 1962 to 1971. John W. McCormack was born in South Boston, less than a mile from the University of Massachusetts Boston, Harbor Campus. The McCormack Institute represents the university's commitment to applied policy research — particularly on issues of concern to New England — and to public affairs education and public service.

The New England Journal of Public Policy is published by the John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs, University of Massachusetts Boston. Subscriptions are $100 per year for institutions and $20 per year for libraries and individuals. Manuscripts and correspondence should be sent to the New England Journal of Public Policy, John W. McCormack Institute of Public Affairs, 100 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, Massachusetts 02125-3393 (telephone: 617-287-5550; fax: 617-287-5544). See Guidelines for contributors on inside back cover.

My gratitude to all the authors, who stuck with this project despite the many obstacles we had to overcome. I particularly wish to acknowledge the efforts of Bob Gaudet, president of the Horace Mann Foundation, without whose persistence and energy this issue would not have been possible.

I would also like to give special acknowledgment to Lucie Hill-Hester who despite grave illness never lost her smile or her enthusiasm for this issue.

— P.O'M.

The opinions that appear throughout this volume were expressed by participants in two Horace Mann Foundation forums. The October 15, 1992, session considered the role of the legislature, unions, higher education, and the business community in education reform efforts. The November 24, 1992, meeting focused on the role of education in keeping the American economy competitive in the global market, school choice and vouchers as reform vehicles, and the role of the public in effecting school change. The quotations were compiled by Pat Kelleher, a health care administrator and member of the Horace Mann Foundation advisory board.
