College I and College II

We can minimize confusion if we now drop all references to Thursday's College and Friday's College. Use instead the designators of the buildings under construction at Columbia Point. Thursday's College will move into Building 010. We may call it College I. Friday's College will move into Building 020. We may call it College II. Your best efforts to gain currency for the new labels will be helpful, particularly as we now grow close to the time when faculty members will be asked to review shop drawings and other matters which pertain to the building they will occupy.

Perhaps in a year or so we can begin to think of more felicitous labels for the names of the Colleges.-----
William R. Hamilton, Jr., Vice Chancellor

Neighborhood Youth Program

The Neighborhood Youth Program of the Action for Boston Community Development, Inc. (ABCD) has been provided campus space from now through August 20 for its educational program. For this purpose, rooms 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, and 319 in the Sawyer Building have been assigned.----- W.R. Hamilton, Jr., Vice Chancellor

Admissions

New students at UMass/Boston for the coming year will include some 900 regular and special admissions freshmen and some 500 transfer students.----- F. Donald Costello, Director of Admissions.

Danforth Associate

Asst. Prof. Salvatore Schiavo-Campo (Economics) and his wife have been appointed as Danforth Associates in recognition for their excellence in teaching and their concern for human values. They are among 175 persons in colleges and universities throughout the United States selected for this honor. The Danforth Foundation says, "Through a careful process of selection of faculty members, and their spouses, the Program seeks to find men and women whose gifts in teaching and human relations, whose interests in students as persons, and whose sensitivities to values derived from religious faith and ethical concern, demonstrate a capacity for distinctive leadership among American youth".-----John Larner

College III

The Report of the University Committee to Plan College III has been completed. Although it has not yet been reviewed by the University Senate or the Chancellor, copies of the report including its preamble and chapters on Public Service Careers, Clientele, Curriculum Organization, Advising System, Administration, Personnel, and Next Steps in the process of establishing College III are available in the office of Richard Freeland, Assistant to the Chancellor, 1-1221B.-----John Larner

The Exceptional Parent

A new publication has been launched in Boston by three noted psychologists, which gives practical guidance for the parents of exceptional children. The editors are Dr. Maxwell J. Schleifer, both of the UMass/Boston psychology department, and Dr. Lewis B. Klebanoff of Boston University. TIME in its June 26 issue favorably reviewed the efforts of the publishing team. The editors will be assisted in producing the magazine by experts in medicine, special education, law, dentistry, and child development.----- John Larner

Cab Driving Teaches Professor about Life

Asst. Prof. Harry Brill (Sociology) is featured in a Boston Globe "Top Spot" story about his appetite for knowledge and the practical application of it as a sociologist in community and classroom settings. In the article by Gloria Negri, he describes UMass/Boston as an institution that is "fantastically exciting".----- John Larner
