Community University Project for Literacy (CUPL)

Carol Chandler-Rourke

University of Massachusetts Boston, Carol.Chandler@umb.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarworks.umb.edu/ocp_posters

Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons, Community Engagement Commons, and the Reading and Language Commons

Recommended Citation

http://scholarworks.umb.edu/ocp_posters/90

This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Office of Community Partnerships at ScholarWorks at UMass Boston. It has been accepted for inclusion in Office of Community Partnerships Posters by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks at UMass Boston. For more information, please contact library.uasc@umb.edu.
Summary/Abstract

The Community-University Project for Literacy (CUPL) provides an academic structure for undergraduates to provide 40 hours of service each semester as tutors at community-based learning centers while attending a credit-bearing seminar at UMass/Boston. Course are:

- Language, Literacy and Community (Fall)
- ESL Tutor Training Seminar (Spring)

“This class has been an experience I will never forget. It gave me the opportunity to try to do something I've wanted to do since I was seven years old. I always wanted to teach, but events in my life beyond my control have prevented me from following this dream of mine.” CUPL Tutor

Goals and Objectives

CUPL:
- Recruits students of linguistically and culturally diverse backgrounds to meet the needs of learners in community-based programs.
- Provides a forum for students to discuss their tutoring experiences and to problem-solve together.

New Goals for 2013-14

- Through the Civic Engagement Scholars Initiative CUPL will strengthen youth development and civic participation service components, review program evaluation processes and expand course offerings to include winter and summer sessions.

Approaches and Methods

CUPL combines study in adult education, first and second language acquisition and community issues with tutoring fieldwork.

As the majority of tutors are ESL students themselves, training is designed to encourage students to reflect on their own educational and language learning experiences and to apply this reflection to their practice.

Results/Impacts

Since 1990, CUPL has worked closely with more than 20 community-based organizations and schools serving immigrant and refugee communities and has recruited, trained and placed hundreds of undergraduates from more than 30 countries. CUPL students:

- develop a more profound understanding of the meaning of learning/teaching and of themselves as learners/teachers
- Increase their confidence as language learners and in their ability to contribute to their communities
- explore new academic and career options

"When I first began the program, not being a native speaker of English, my reading, writing and conversation abilities were very limited. The program really helped me find my own voice. One thing that helped a lot was that the material used in the class was all relevant to my own life and the lives of my students. I overcame the fear of presenting myself. I have built a lot of self-confidence, and it was because of the program. If it wasn't for the program, I don't know what I would have done. You find yourself. I know what I'm about, what I can do, what I can't do. You learn your strengths and limitations.” CUPL Tutor

Results/Impacts

Enable community learning centers to serve additional students and provide more individualized instruction

Tutors bring new ideas, materials and fresh perspectives to the centers/classrooms where they work

Tutors become role models for many students and often continue their service as volunteers or professional staff

"The program has been important in helping adult education students into college - to make that transition. Students are able to ask the tutors, 'How does it feel to be a student, to have a job and family and be a student at the same time?'” Teacher

Results/Impacts

"I believe (the tutor's) greatest value to our class was that she was a Chinese student who is just a few steps ahead of where my students hope to be next year or two. I could not have asked for a better tutor. She understood the students, spoke their language and knew about their problems in learning English and integrating themselves into the American society in general and American colleges in particular. She was a great role model for everyone in the English Transitional Program.” Teacher at CUPL

Partnerships and Contact Information

As the majority of tutors are ESL students themselves, training is designed to encourage students to reflect on their own educational and language learning experiences and to apply this reflection to their practice.

Partnerships and Contact Information

Asian American Civic Center, Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center, Brockton Adult Education Program, Centro Latino de Chelsea, Community Learning Center, Everett Literacy Program, Haitian-American Public Health Initiative, Haitian Multi-Service Center, Harbor Point, Immigrant Learning Center, Massachusetts Alliance of Portuguese Speakers, New American Center, Watertown High School, Quincy Asian Resources, Vietnamese-American Civic Center

For more information contact: Carol Chandler-Rourke, English Dept.