Involvement

Julius Pete Hayes returned home over the weekend which is good news for all on our campus who know and respect him, a sergeant on our Campus Security staff.

Sgt. Hayes came to work that blue Monday and one of his details was to bring deposits from the campus to the State Street Bank downtown. While on that mission his radio speaker blared that an emergency situation--a student wielding a knife in the Science Auditorium--was underway.

Rushing to the campus, he participated with others of the university community to assist the student. For his efforts, Pete Hayes was cut in the throat, chest, back, and arms. But he considers himself a lucky man. And you can be sure that we're happy he is recovering and soon will be back on duty.

Prof. James Sweeney was also off-campus when the drama began. The troubled student was asked if there was anyone he would talk with, and Prof. Sweeney's name was mentioned. Campus police sped to Sweeney's home in Boston and brought him back to the campus. Sweeney, like Hayes, made himself involved in helping a person in need.

Others were involved that day, including Robert Gorman of the Maintenance staff from whom the student broke away after Gorman's attempt to disarm him. Health Center personnel, students, chaplains Fr. James Rafferty and Sarah Small, Patrolmen McDonough and Quinn of District 11, Bert Fliegel, people from Student Affairs—all became involved.

UMass-Boston that day was not a Kitty Genovese's Flushing, New York.

The University of Massachusetts has been invited to submit up to three nominations for the Henry Luce Foundation's Luce Scholars Program in Asia during 1976-77. These scholarships carry a basic stipend of $9,000. Basic requirements for eligibility are: U.S. citizenship; maximum age 27 on September 1, 1976; at least a Bachelor's degree by September 1976; a record of highest academic achievement; evidence of outstanding leadership ability; a mature and clearly defined career interest in a specific field.

The program is defined as being experiential rather than academic in approach; according to the Foundation's bulletin, "Although some scholars have been attached to Asian institutions in teaching or research capacities, none of the . . . participants is formally enrolled as a student in a college or university and no academic credit is extended . . . At the heart of the enterprise are internships and job placements that are arranged for each participating scholar on the basis of his or her professional interests and background."

There is no limitation on fields covered by the Program, except for two proscribed areas: a career interest and/or academic in approach; according to the Foundation's bulletin, "Although some scholars have been attached to Asian institutions in teaching or research capacities, none of the . . . participants is formally enrolled as a student in a college or university and no academic credit is extended . . . National Competitions For Graduate Fellowships: 1976-77

The fellowships listed here are competitive and are open to seniors (class of 1976). As the application deadlines and Graduate Record Examination registration dates are soon, it would be very helpful if these fellowships could be announced by faculty.

1. DANFORTH FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

The University of Massachusetts-Boston is eligible to nominate four seniors to the Danforth Fellowship competition. One recent graduate who plans to attend graduate school may be nominated in addition to the four seniors.

The UMass-Boston nominees will be chosen by a campus selection committee which will interview only those seniors who are strongly recommended by their departments. Department chairmen are asked to identify candidates and send to Mary Winslow the names and two letters of recommendation for each candidate, by Friday, October 10, 1975.

All Danforth candidates are required to take the Graduate Record Examination. Special GRE registration forms are available in the Advising Office (Administration Bldg., Room 210).

2. NATIONAL FELLOWSHIPS FUND/FORD FOUNDATION GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS PROGRAM

With the support of the Ford Foundation, the National Fellowships Fund and the Educational Testing Service are offering a limited number of fellowships to minority Americans who plan to pursue full-time study toward the doctoral degree in the social sciences, natural sciences or the humanities, in preparation for a career in higher education.

Information on these fellowships is available in the Advising Office. Students apply directly and should register for the Graduate Record Examination.

3. FULBRIGHT-HAYS GRANTS FOR GRADUATE STUDY ABROAD

Some Fulbright grants are available to first-year graduate students. Candidates (seniors) must demonstrate the "necessity for foreign study in terms of their future and professional aims."

4. MARSHALL SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS
Thirty scholarships are available for men and women under 26 to work for further degrees at British universities for a period of two years. Only four awards are available to students in the Northeastern region.

A selection committee will interview all seriously interested candidates. As applications are due no later than October 22, 1975 students should arrange to speak with Bette Davis in the Advising Office before October 10 to secure information and applications.

5. RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS
Thirty-two Rhodes Scholarships are awarded each year for two to three years' study at Oxford. Four students are selected from the New England region. The scholarships are open only to men; by 1976, it is anticipated that they will be open to men and women. Like the Marshall, a Rhodes scholarship is for students with high academic standing and an extremely convincing justification for wanting to study at Oxford.

Students apply directly and should do so before October 31; information and applications are available in the Advising Office.

Information on other sources of scholarship aid, other national competitions, and loans for graduate study is available in the Advising Office.

Specific questions on the national competitions for graduate fellowships should be directed to Mary Winslow, Administration Bldg., Room 210.
